NOTES:

Thank you for trusting me to build a RoadWing for you.

I do not know what year GL1800 this shock came off. It was removed in working order and that is how I received it. The manual RAP and pre-load are from a Honda ST1300. I sent it assembled but you will need to disassemble it to install it. I suggest removing the line from the RAP side. I filled it with oil so as long as you are careful and don't spill any oil when installing it you should be good to go. If you spill any oil you can pick up some 5w fork oil. I used Lucas Oil 10771 Fork Oil. You will also need a kids medicine syringe (or something like that) to fill and bleed it. You can tape the end of the hose and be sure to keep the RAP handle down till you reassemble it. Includes used banjo bolts, washers and hose. Visit <https://www.jrbk.net/roadwing/preload-raps/> to get an idea of where to mount it on the bike.

The shock, pre-load and manual RAP were inspected and tested when they arrived and prior to shipment. The shock was disassembled (absorber left intact) and cleaned with Yamaclean. The preload assembly was completely disassembled as well. I cleaned it with Yamaclean on the outside and a towel on the inside. I inspected seals and gaskets. I added some grease to the gaskets to keep them soft and working properly. I reassembled it and then tested it before taking pictures and getting it ready to ship. I converted it to a Roadwing using the method described at my website (<https://www.jrbk.net/roadwing/roadwing-conversion/>). Here is a summary of what was done: A new mounting hole was drilled in the shock arm and the excess was cut off and filed. The original bushing was pressed out from the collar and a new bushing and washers was installed in the collar with parts from McMaster-Carr. I cleaned up the shock when it was disassembled, using Yamaclean and a towel. The spring may have some surface rust but there is no rot and it is fully intact.

It will take some elbow grease to install this on your Road Star. Details on how to mount this shock can be found at <https://www.jrbk.net/roadwing-install/>

I (<https://www.facebook.com/jrbk08>) am very active on the Road Star Facebook groups (since 2019) and am known among the other veteran users and admins. I am a Moderator on the Road Star Clinic Facebook Group and the Yamaha Roadstar Riders Facebook Group. In addition I have been selling on eBay since 1998 and have a 100% feedback rating. I have converted and sold over 99 RoadWings and other parts on the Road Star Facebook groups. I encourage you to search my name among the groups and you will find lots of activity by me. I can supply references from previous Facebook clients if you like. The cost of the shocks and the parts for these conversions keep going up and PayPal fees have continued to rise over the two years I have been converting shocks. Therefore if you want to pay via PayPal Goods and Services then ADD $25.00 as indicated below.
